In Marie José's folder, we found a map of Lille and instructions that give the address of her number one suspect. We had to draw circles and construct lines to find this.

After following these instructions, a precise place was uncovered. Somewhere near the current "Hall aux sucres". If you go there, you will find this: Pharaon de Winter lived in this place. That means he was her number one suspect!

Walter Sickert painted "Jack the Ripper's bedroom" in 1908 but someone covered part of the painting. We did a chromatography to determine who covered the painting. First, we used a sample of the painting, then Lionel E.A Sargant's paint, Pharaon de Winter's paint and Walter Sickert's paint since they are all painters. The third stain is identical to the sample of the painting. These results show that it's Pharaon de Winter who hid this part of the painting.
